

RECONSIDERATION OF MATERIALS

Reconsideration of Materials: a review process for library materials that patrons may use to initiate the review of materials to which they object.

Request for Reconsideration Form: the document that patrons must fill out and return in-person for the reconsideration process to begin.

Challenge: an attempt to remove or restrict library materials, based upon an individual's objection.

OBJECTIVES

Re-state the Reconsideration of Materials segment from the APL Collection Management policy.

Offer clarity for the timeline and the method of response.

List library materials that have been challenged within the last three years.

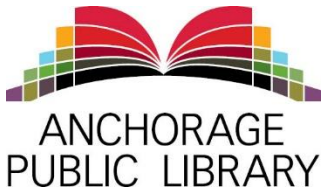

POLICY

Re-stated from the Collection Management Policy:

Individuals objecting to specific materials in the collection may initiate a request for reconsideration by filling out a Request for Reconsideration form available at all locations and on the Library web site. The Collection Management Services Coordinator will review the request and assign one or more librarians to read, view, or listen to the item being challenged. This group will meet and discuss the item in question and re-evaluate it against the Collection Management Policy with consideration to how the item does or does not suit the Library's mission.

A request for reconsideration will only be considered if it is from an individual who is a resident of the Municipality of Anchorage or is otherwise eligible to hold an Anchorage Public Library card. Items challenged within the previous three calendar years are not eligible for reconsideration.

A written reply indicating the Library's position and any action taken will be sent to the individual making the complaint within 15 business days dependent on the Library's ability to obtain adequate copies of the materials for all members of the reconsideration committee.

This email will indicate the start of the 15 business-day period of review, unless a different time frame is stated in the email.
